Many fine examples of highboys originated in New England during the 18th century. Our High Chest of Drawers is a magnificent example of an early Queen Anne piece made in New Hampshire about 1750. In keeping with the guidelines of excellent furniture design, our Highboy incorporates all the elements necessary to be rated as a masterpiece. The high arch of the apron and the gracefully curved cabriole legs add lift to the case and accentuate the vertical proportions so highly regarded by the master cabinet makers in the colonies.

This handsome Highboy provides generous storage and the flat top design allows it to fit in any home. Available in Walnut and Curly Maple. The Highboy measures 74"H x 40 1/2"W x 22 1/2"D.

Fine examples of hunt boards are rare, probably because many were destroyed during the Civil War and reconstruction. When an occasional one is offered at auction, they demand extraordinary prices. Our hunt board, circa 1820, is big enough to serve a buffet for large numbers of guests or perfect for Laying out a family brunch.

Behind the two doors is plenty of space for spirits bottles and the center drawers can accommodate your silver and linens. Elegantly tapered Hepplewhite legs, book matched veneered drawer and door fronts, and solid Hepplewhite style brasses blend to create a most beautiful and practical piece of furniture.

Our reproduction of a mid 18th century English antique is one of the most versatile pieces in our inventory. The low sideboard used alone is equally at home in a dining area or hallway. Add the cupboard, as shown, and the look turns "high country", especially if decorated with pewter or redware.

The three drawers offer generous storage and the cupboard is a treasure waiting to be decorated. The upper and lower moldings are chamfered; a nice touch, and the front cabriole legs are nicely carved and developed.

The sideboard measures 71"W x 34"H x 19 ½"D, and the cupboard is 71"W x 48"H x 10 ½"D. Available in Cherry, as shown, and Mahogany.

This wonderful box was found in New Orleans at a prominent antique dealer who had a pair of the originals valued at $42,000. They dated early 19th Century.

Our box has striping on the front and the top with a stunning oval urn medallion centered on the slant lid. Solid brass escutcheons, side handles and ball feet complete the overall elegance of this piece. And, for a little of intrigue we have taken the liberty of adding a secret drawer capable of holding small treasures.

We offer this very handsome piece in three versions; the Basic Box with a plain interior; the Knife Box with a pacific silvercloth liner partitioned to hold a service for twelve, the Decanter which includes a hunter green liner, four 26-ounce Italian decanters and two rocks glasses. The box will demand a prominent place in your home and you might want two of these just to balance your setting. These will make incredible gifts!

Note the incredible beauty of a perfectly styled Hepplewhite chest, with gracefully tapered high French feet that flare to the front and sides. The front is bowed or swelled, a feature that only a master cabinetmaker could attempt with any success. Draw your attention to the drawers. They are identical in size, a common practice in chests of that period and a change from the earlier Queen Anne and Chippendale styles where the drawers were graduated from top to bottom.

The case is solid mahogany; the drawer fronts have contrasting veneers of tiger maple edged with ebony inlay and framed with cross-banded mahogany. To achieve this Extraordinary "look" we used brown mahogany stain for all the mahogany and our aniline dye on the maple. Full finishing instructions come with your kit.

The chest measures 36"H x 41"W x 22"D. It is available in mahogany with mahogany and tiger maple drawers fronts, or in cherry or mahogany. The top drawer locks

Chippendale Oxbow Chest, Massachusetts circa 1770, is considered one of the our finest accomplishments. It was copied from an original owned by a notable antique dealer near New Hope, PA, and held a price tag of $35,500. Sometimes called a reverse serpentine chest, the Oxbow has double ogee feet, a scrolled base, four graduated drawers with blocked ends and beaded edges. The top follows the contour of the drawers.

In the 18th century, only the most skilled artisans made oxbow chest. They were often used in pairs for the focal point in a dining or living room, but are equally appropriate in entry halls or bedrooms.

Available in Mahogany with brass hardware, or Curly Maple with burnished pulls (as shown). The chest measures 38 ¼ W x 31 ½ H x 24 ¼ D.

Chests of the particular design were crafted exclusively in colonial Pennsylvania. When we found the 1785 original, we immediately recognized that its size and simple style reflected the best of American Chippendale. Fluted quarter columns, applied moldings and ogee bracket feet are classic features indicative of the period. Nine graduating drawers provide huge amounts of storage.

The Tall Chest is available in Mahogany, Cherry or Curly Maple. 63 1/4"H x 44"W x 22 1/8"D.

This chest of drawers is very typical of the type rural New England cabinet makers were producing in the mid 18th century. They were likely to be made from locally grown woods, such as curly maple and cherry, both woods being very plentiful in New England. Our chest is perfectly proportioned with a nicely molded overhanging top, four graduated drawers and high bracket feet. Overall, this chest exemplifies the Colonial preference for "neat and plain", and its size makes it ideal for decorating either in today's homes or in an authentic Colonial setting.

Available in Curly Maple and Cherry. The chest measures 34 1/2"H x 36"W x 19"D.
