Cómoda Semanario

Producto nº

566

American tall, narrow chests of drawers were inspired by designs originating in France during the mid to late 18th century. Called semaniers, which means seven days, they were used to accommodate lingerie for every day of the week. It is surprising how much on of these chests hold, considering how little space it requires. It is not only the perfect piece for most bedrooms, but it fits easily in hallways and even bathrooms. Its designs simple but stately and can easily combine with any traditional or contemporary furniture styles. The non-locking drawers are accentuated by decorative key escutcheons and classic oval backplates and pulls.

Choose Cherry or Mahogany.
The chest measures 52"H x
22"W x 16"D.

This beautiful box, very close in size to a tea caddy, was originally fitted as an inkwell. We know this piece was made in Newport, Rhode Island, circa 1761, and the contoured base is suggestive of the John Goddard style. As with most of our boxes this size, we offer a double layered, jewelry liner insert that makes it a very desirable and lovely place to store your valuables.

Available in Cherry, Mahogany or Walnut,
the box measures 7 3/4"H x 10

Secreter Newport

Producto nº

602

Our Secretary is an accurate reproduction of one made by John Townsend in 1765. The upper case has an open bonnet with three carved urn and flame finials. Fluted quarter columns frame the tri-fold doors which are blocked in typical Newport fashion, each topped with a carved shell. The interior has three adjustable shelves. The block and shell lid of the desk conceals six cubbyholes, eight drawers and four secret compartments. The three graduated drawers, cut from a single board, continue the blocking theme down to the base rail, which sits on carved ogee bracket feet.

The secretary, which is available in Mahogany or Cherry, measures 94 3/4"H x 44 3/4"W x 25"D. The writing surface is 31"H.

Cupboards became very popular in colonial days with the growth of the China trade. They provided excellent safe storage for fine china and became a wonderful place for a family to display their treasures. Corner Cupboard, circa 1750, is one of the best examples we have come across. The bracket feet support a base with panel doors enclosing the Lower cabinet with one shelf. The top, crowned with a bold molding, blends perfectly with the base. The upper door has individual glass panes with the top three being arched - an unusual feature for such an early piece.

The cupboard is available in Curly Maple (as shown) with poplar used as the secondary wood. It is also available in Cherry and Mahogany, where poplar is used only in the lower case behind the doors. Measures 81 "H x 40"W x 19"D

In 18th century America, there were colonies that excelled in furniture design and craftsmanship. In the western part of the Massachusetts Bay Colony, along the Connecticut River, exceptional woodworkers were creating masterpieces like this 1750 original of the refined tea table. Rare for its diminutive size and perfect proportions, this Queen Anne style table has impeccable details such as the molded tray top with hand carved corners.

The delicate fan carving, and its one drawer is a unique feature for tea tables of this era.

Available in Mahogany, Cherry or Curly Maple, the table measures 26 3/4"H x 21 1/2"W x 14 1/2"D.

Butterfly tables were first made in New England as early as 1980. Their quaint charm and simple beauty surpass other tables that serve the same purpose. An early form of the drop leaf table, the name is derived for the wing shaped brackets that hold the table's leaves. Original butterfly tables are extremely rare, which makes all known examples very valuable.

The table has a 24" diameter top when open, Gracefully turned splayed legs are joined by stretchers for solid support. These tables must have splayed legs since the butterfly will not work properly with straight legs. It would be difficult to find a piece of furniture more useful or versatile than a Butterfly Table.

Available in Mahogany (as shown), Cherry or Curly Maple
The Pilgrim Butterfly Table measures 21"H and 9 ½ "W with the leaves down.
