Canoa BARRACUDA

Producto nº

487

Was originally designed for the speed of a solo marathon racer but more maneuverability and seaworthiness to allow a more varied paddling experience. This is not a boat for novices. A good sit-and-switch style of paddling will really make the boat fly but its narrow waterline beam will keep you on your toes.

The original boat had a knuckle near the sheer (ala Osprey) but that proved difficult for amateur builders so is the knuckle replaced with a strong tumblehome. Narrow planks along this area will be needed but the benefits in paddling far outweigh any building difficulties. A 1" vertical strip along the sheer makes installing the rubrails simpler.

A sliding seat is almost essential in this boat. It should allow seating from station 25 at the most forward position to Station 9.0 at the aftermost position.

You won't be able to race this boat as it is too narrow to fit marathon rules.

The Champlain High-ender, built by the Peterborough Canoe Company, was one of their most popular designs.

Originally built in cedar/canvas, it appeared in their final catalogue of 1961. The Champlain Low-ender with less height in the ends, was built on the same mold. A good traditional style general purpose recreational canoe.

Canoa CHESNUT SPECIAL

Producto nº

475

From the 1950 Chestnut Canoe Co. Catalogue - The Chestnut 50-lb. Special has been designed to meet a certain demand for an extremely light weight canoe of good carrying capacity and has proved very popular. Owing to its width and flat bottom very steady and the ends are low, making it easy to portage through the brush. Forty years later it is one of their better known models, favoured by fishermen and solo trippers. The moderate rocker and soft bilges should make this a great canoe for traditional style solo paddling. In order to adapt to strip planking, some modifications to the original lines have been made. A keel was recommended on the original canoe because of the light weight ribs and planking. Since they are not saying it is for directional stability, we can assume that the keel is optional. A canoe of this shape and length could benefit with a keel for directional stability and protection to the bottom.

Canoa CIRRUS

This canoe is a no compromise approach to the performance tthising canoe. This not a rehash of an outmoded racing hull, but a clean, fresh approach to high spe tthising that ignores the rules and conventions of the past. The radically asymmet low wetted surface hull is heavily flared in the topsides for a dry ride and the unic forward hull shape permits maneuverability undreamed of in conventional performance cruisers. This is a performance canoe that turns when dead level! No need to heel it over on its ear to get it around.

Above all, it is a tripper. It has a smooth predictable feel in waves without the unsettling tendency to broach which is characteristic of canoes having straight ke lines. It will carry up to 490 pounds with ease making it more than adequate for m tripping needs.

It is an exquisitely beautiful canoe, fast, maneuverable, seaworthy and perfectly at home in its element.

Efficient tripping canoe

This canoe features an asymmetrical hull with a slim bow, a maximum beam aft of middle and filled out stern sections to reduce resistance. The gently rockered pro lets the boat turn with ease.

Because of the slight tumblehome this canoe is a wonderful solo boat, but most of the tir it can be found heading off on trips with two avid canoeists on board. A fast tripping can that's also easy to build.

Designed with precision and care, it incorporates many of the hull shape subtleties learne from his extensive paddling, sailing and rowing.

This big canoe is designed for those who simply needed to carry a bigger load. Whether it's more people, bigger people or more packs for an extended wilderness trip, they will fit. The resulting stability is high. With slightly more rocker than modern canoes, it has gained back the turning ability found in traditional canoe shapes, without sacrificing the speed of the modern hull. This is one of the prettiest canoes you'll find.

Canoa HIAWATHA

General purpose recreational

This traditional design has a sheer-line and bow profile reminiscent of the early Canadian style canoe. Below the water line, the hull is a more up-to-date shape for paddling efficiency.

The hull is a shallow arch with a moderately flat keel-line that flows into a shallow to become a fine deep vee at the bow for directional stability, speed and maneuverability. The vee is carried as far back as possible, acting as a keel, it contributes to directional stability without sacrificing maneuverability.

A good solo canoe, its also very fast and responsive with a double paddle.

Canoa HURON

478

The lines for this canoe were taken from an original Huron built in cedar/canvas by the Peterborough Canoe Company.

It has good carrying capacity while retaining a light draft, and is an easy paddling craft that can be handled well in rough or swift waters. The gunwale line is straight in these models and is lowered at bow and stem, thus offering less wind resistance. The rounded bottom may reduce carrying capacity, but the paddler may expect a quick and responsive craft. The canoe is easy to plank, and the woodstrip/epoxy version should weigh 45 to 55 lbs.

This canoe is the forerunner of a new breed of fast, seaworthy and maneuverable tripping canoes designed to meet the modern tripper's needs. For the experienced tripper, it offers the big boat feel of a seventeen footer with the ability to go anywhere even under the most severe conditions, while the novice will still be pleasantly surprised by his control in conditions that would be frightening in other canoes. Owners have found them to be superb whitewater boats with speed, stability, and responsiveness rarely found outside of dedicated whitewater craft.

It is designed to carry between 400 and 500 pounds when tripping but can be a real blast when lightly loaded for day paddling or whitewater. For a real treat, paddle solo with a kneeling thwart. Now that's real fun! If you can have only one canoe, the majority of your paddling is devoted to tripping, then it should be your choice.

The clean lines look gorgeous in cedar strip, and its 16.5 foot length will fit in an garage.

This canoe is a truly extraordinary small canoe. Quick and responsive, it is a delight to paddle in all conditions. A canoe that is equally at home on flat water or white water. Most surprising is that all this performance comes with a solid, stable feel over to the swamp point and beyond. For medium and smaller couples, as a graceful cottage canoe or for a weekend getaway, and all those who just plain paddle for fun.

High-performance boats.

That is, if high performance is defined as comfort, good handling, rewarding speed, stability, and classic good looks. Originally drawn as stable and compact alternative to more traditional sea kayaks, they have found fans among paddlers of all skill levels because they offer so much boat in such a light and easy-to-manage package.

It offers the stability sought by nature photographers, fly fisherman and birders.

Mahogany trim on cockpits and rails, cambered decks, and contoured slatted seats add grace notes, while the fiberglassed 6mm bottom panel will absorb years of groundings in shoal water.

Mill Creek 16,5 Kit

Length: 16'6", Beam:33", Weight:55lbs

The Mill Creek 16.5 is enormously popular because it can be used in so many ways. Not only can you paddle it as a single or a double, but you can sail it, add a sliding-seat rowing unit, or even adapt an electric outboard. The Mill Creek 16.5's stability will reassure the most nervous paddlers, while the low freeboard and light weight yield better speed and handling in wind than the average canoe.

There's enough capacity for camping gear (with optional deck hatches), and the boat can be easily trimmed by sliding the seats fore and aft on their mounts.

Mill Creek 13 Kit

Length: 13', Beam:29", Weight:36 lbs.

The Mill Creek 13 echoes the look and feel of 1920's "double paddle" canoes. Combining the stability and comfortable seating of a canoe with the light weight and decked-in security of a kayak, the Mill Creek 13 is perfect for photography, fly fishing, birding, or just relaxed paddling. Like all the Mill Creeks, the 13 is surprisingly fast thanks to her efficient 5-panel multichine hull and feather-light 40lb weight. The cockpit is 54" long, so entry and egress are easy for everyone.

Mill Creek 13/15*Accesorio en kit

While sailing craft have always been a part of CLC's stable of designs, it took us a while to find quality small boat sails at affordable prices. Working with professional sailmakers at a major loft, we have developed sails for CLC boats that are beautifully crafted of white dacron and have precise three-dimensional shapes for maximum performance, upwind and down.

This is a type of sail called a "balance lug". 31 square feet with one reef point; grommets for lacing on head and foot.

The Mill Creek 15 is longer and slightly narrower. She will delight kayakers who paddle longer distances or want to carry camping gear, but who prefer a stable, open cockpit boat.

The mid section and profile has much of the hollow in the water lines removed. This uninterrupted direction of water flow allows the canoe to move through the water with the least amount of resistance. It adds some fullness (lift) to the hull below the water line as well as being a very easy shape to plank. It is long, sleek, easy to plank and easier to paddle.
